

Cri-1: "The Platform for Transnational Social Strike" [in English]

Saturday 15 October, 12.00–13.30, Kata

There is a discussion going on right now in Europe about social strike. In many countries the right to strike is under attack, labour rights are eroding and jobs are becoming increasingly insecure. In early October last year, a meeting was held in Poznan, Poland, which brought together organizations, trade unions and workers' collectives from many European countries. The discussions were about how to overcome the division between those who have the right to strike or not, how to use the strike as a political weapon to capture the diversity of struggles in society and how therefore a transnational social strike can backfire capital across borders and break the chains of production.

The 1st of March this year, actions were coordinated in around twenty European countries. An international action day was held against borders and for migrant rights.

How are struggles in production linked to struggles within circulation and reproduction? Is it possible to organize the non-organisable?

In Paris this autumn in October, it is time for the next step in the process. In Paris where we have seen the resistance against Loi Travail reshape the boundaries of traditional organization and the rise of the movement Nuit Debout.

Soon, on 21–23 October, another platform meeting is going to be held in Paris – how is it possible for us in Sweden to take part in this process?

More information: http: //www.transnational-strike.info/

Eleonora Cappuccilli, Precarious disconnections, Bologna, Italy

Alessio Lunghi, Plan C, London, England

Magda Malinowska, Worker's initiative, Poznan, Polen

Sylvain Alias, Sud Solidaires, Paris, France

Moderators: Sarah Kim and Julia Lindblom, Allt åt Alla Stockholm

(Det är möjligt att ställa frågor på svenska, som översätts till engelska.)